

Chatham Historical Journals Now Available Online

CCHA's complete collection of Chatham Historical Journals, an occasional publication of CCHA from 1988 through 2008, is now available here on our website. We are delighted to share the contents of these publications with everyone interested in Chatham's history.

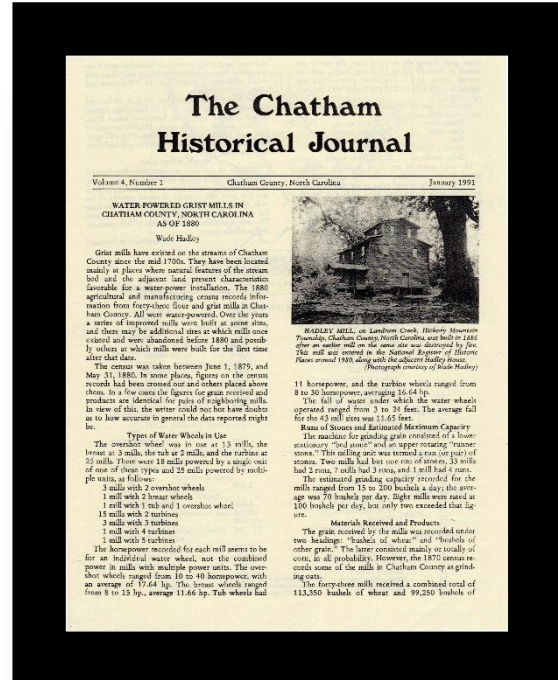

Journal articles were contributed by a number of authors and cover a wide variety of topics, such as the county courthouse, silk culture, coal mining, mills, hunting, the Chatham rabbit, notable Chatham people, land grants, industry, and family and oral histories. Most issues also contain photographs.

Peruse the collection at your leisure by selecting the issue of interest from our annotated list.

Go to list of Chatham Historical Journals.

For those who prefer printed copies, a limited number of complete loose-leaf sets are available and may be purchased in our Gift Shop, online, or by mail, while they last.

Go to our price list.

Note of appreciation:

The late Jane Pyle served as editor of the Journal and wrote several of the more lengthy research articles they contain. We owe her a great debt for her conscientious production of the Journals, and for sharing the fruits of her bountiful curiosity about so many aspects of Chatham County history.